

TEACHING CHARITY BY CHART

TABLES THAT APPEAL TO THOSE AT THE CROWDED CITY SHOW.

Graphic illustration of the Half Time Classes That Make a Quicker Appeal Than Columns of Type—Not All of Them Illustrate the Dark Side.

A greatly increased number of persons are daily attending the exhibition of congestion of population in New York in the Museum of Natural History, and yesterday afternoon there was a question of congestion to be considered while you waited. The subject of the exhibit would draw no such crowd if it were not so graphic. This one could easily determine by observing the groups about different exhibits. One, for example, which has always a crowd before it is a silhouette stretched across a wide window showing a line of children, which an inscription explains thus:

This line of children represents 1,000 of the children in the city of New York on a part school time. All the children on a part time reach 25, in the future these children from school the nearer they are to the policeman.

At the head of the line of thirteen children is a teacher standing on the steps of a schoolhouse. The children nearest her appear to enter, but her uplifted hands forbid them. A group further from her are idle, then two boys are fighting, and the last two are playing cards, but an impending policeman is about to capture them.

All that that little picture and caption tells is told elaborately in leaflets which visitors pick up or take from the hand of an attendant, and stuff into their pockets indifferently.

So it is with scores of subjects which the exhibit is designed to bring to thoughtful consideration of visitors. The story graphically told is followed with intense interest; the story told in words falls on listless ears.

Another popular set of silhouettes which particularly appeals to matrons gives the average height and weight deduced from measurement and weighing of 7,341 boys and 9,302 girls who live in tenements of one, two, three or four rooms. Take a row of silhouettes representing the naked bodies of four boys, each 5 years old, and the nearby scale shows that such dwellers in one room tenements average 39 inches tall and weigh 37.2 pounds; in two room tenements the figures are 39.9 inches, and 38.9 pounds; three rooms, 40.7 inches, 39.5 pounds; four room, 41.4 inches and 40.1 pounds. Approximately the same progressive increase in stature and weight is shown in the series representing girls of the same age. There is the whole story of a fat and uninteresting pamphlet told at a glance; the less space the child has at home the shorter and thinner the child is. It makes subscribers for some anti-congestion movement without a word being spoken or a page read.

The society, which tries to better the conditions of work and the wages of sweatshop laborers, has a series of exhibitions which are eloquent. Your attention to the general problem is called by a large card inscribed "Laws regulating home work do not prevent employment of children or restrict hours of women or children's home work."

This is effective only in sharpening attention to what follows. First is a display of many finished articles made in the tenement houses, as, for example, a dozen men's neckties, bright new silk, the kind which sell for $1.50 each in the shop. A sign tells you that home workers get 55 cents a dozen for lining and hand sewing the ties. It is a high unit rate, but the work is slow and slow, and the average wage of the workers is $4 a week.

Now you are getting interested in the problem and pass on with more understanding to a group of large photographs showing the home workers as they are found in their tasks. But photographs are deceptive; they do not always convey an accurate idea of spaces, of physical conditions. But this idea is accurately conveyed in the next exhibit in the series.

Here is a reproduction with real properties, as the stage folk say, of a tenement room 8 1/2 feet, in which seven persons—a mother and six children—are engaged in making artificial roses. Excellent choice of work. All in the room is real except the figures of the workers, which may have been supplied by the artist of the Eden Musée. This room contains eight chairs or stools, a table around which all the roomers sit or stand, a common kitchen table, a three-quarters iron bed which is thrown a collapsible iron crib, and a washstand. Burly men in their clothes hang over the foot of the bed or are thrown on the floor.

Next to this is shown the same room at night. The washstand is broken and expanded and two children are asleep in it, the three-quarters bed is occupied by the mother and two children, and the work table and washstand drawn close together make a narrow space.

Not all of the exhibition is designed to show conditions which Gov. Hughes pronounced "intolerable." Improvements are noted as well. Last in the series is a block of existing tenements built under the requirements of the new law. These show at a glance that such tenements do not exclude light and air from their inmates; that their public hallways are light and ventilated. By the side of that model is another of one of the many still intact which were built under the old law, in which ten out of fourteen rooms are dark and unventilated, in which the halls were dark and narrow and the "courts" mere air wells twenty-eight inches wide with no means of escape from their bottom. Such a comparative exhibition gives heart to the visitors; they know that agitation and work have accomplished something—and they join another anti-congestion society.

A chart shows a "bad air block." Blocks of color, deep purple, rise and fall in height and a large map of the city shows the tower of purple represents the death rate from acute respiratory diseases in that bad air block of children under 5 years of age—8 per 1,000. Another chart shows how many children per thousand 5 years of age or under die in that block—92.2. Strangers to New York, of whom there are many among the visitors, look at these charts and read that the block with the death record is bounded by Prince, East Houston, Mott and Elizabeth streets.

"Where is that awful block?" they ask, with frightened eyes. "Where are such hideous conditions permitted?"

"It is near Police Headquarters," some one answers.

BIRMINGHAM'S SPEED TRIAL.

New Scout Cruiser Does More Than Half a Knot Better Than Required.

BOSTON, March 12.—The new scout cruiser Birmingham arrived in Boston harbor this afternoon after a successful four hour speed run from Rockland, Me. The warship made an average of 21.32 knots an hour, which is a trifle more than half a knot in excess of her contract requirement.

Rear Admiral Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, expressed himself as greatly pleased with the Birmingham's run. He said the machinery worked very smoothly and that the machine the speed without the slightest difficulty on 191.69 revolutions per minute.

Mr. Bowles said he had no expectation of beating the record of the Chester because the latter had turbine engines.

The Birmingham left the harbor this evening for a twenty-four hour run in twenty knots to measure coal consumption.

DR. CLARK DUNLOP'S WILL

Leaves $150,000 to Wife for Life and Then to Go to Charity.

The will of Dr. Clark W. Dunlop, who died a few days ago, after a Sheriff's jury had declared him insane, was filed for probate yesterday. It contains provision for a charitable and religious purposes amounting to $150,000. The estate was estimated in the lunacy proceedings at between $60,000 and $100,000.

The will was made in 1903, before Dr. Dunlop had become a victim to senile dementia, which attacked him a couple of years ago. By it a fund of $150,000 is created for the benefit of the widow, Eliza Dunlop, on condition that she shall not remarry. On her death or remarriage the fund is to be split up into two sums, one of $100,000 to go to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church and another of $50,000 to be divided in equal shares between the Young Women's Christian Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Bible and Fruit Mission of the Public Hospitals, the Children's Aid Society and the American Food Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, all of New York City.

There are several bequests of $5,000 each to libraries and newspapers, and a similar amount is left to Charles Sumner Miller, "my friend and trusted legal adviser," who filed the will and who is also named as an executor. With him are joined the widow, the Union Trust Company and Frank H. June of Chicago as executors. The widow inherits the doctor's jewelry, of which there is said to be a large amount, and $8,000 goes to the trustees of Woodlawn Cemetery to erect a plain flat memorial over the grave of a nephew, Samuel H. Dunlop, and to create a fund to care for the mausoleum and graves of the Dunlop family adjoining.

A. F. OF L. TO TALK POLITICS.

Labor Leaders to Meet in Washington on Wednesday Next.

The local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor received official copies of a call yesterday for a special conference of representatives of all its national and international unions in Washington on Wednesday to settle on the future policies of organized labor as represented in the A. F. of L. The federation has a membership, according to its records, of more than 2,000,000 in a hundred or more national and international unions, and the president of each or a substitute will attend the conference, as well as a large number of delegates from the local branches. The meeting, the call says, will be one of the most important in its history ever held in the history of the A. F. of L.

In a statement made last evening Herman Robinson, the Eastern representative of President Gompers of the A. F. of L., said that the issuing of the call for the meeting meant that matters so important are to be considered that President Gompers and the executive council desire before taking them up to have up to date information from all the unions, and continued:

It is impossible to say now whether the conference is likely to result in a decision among other things to take independent political action, but it was a question of this conference that I made the proposition to the Central Federation Union on Sunday to postpone until April 1 action on the question of calling on the executive council of the Federation to order a national convention in order to see what the conference will decide. That proposition was agreed to. The immediate cause for the calling of the conference was the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Danbury case, which was reviewed and a complete programme for the future, affecting the 2,000,000 members of the Federation, decided on. It goes without saying that the question of independent political action will come up, but in what form I could not predict. The matter of taking independent political action is one which I would not like to express an opinion on any way at present.

AN INVENTOR KILLED BY GAS.

John Barry, an Expert in Printing-Telegraphy, Dead at Rosebank, S. I.

John Barry, electrical engineer of the Stock Quotation Telegraph Company and inventor and manufacturer of the Barry printing-telegraph system in use by that company, was asphyxiated by gas early yesterday morning at his home at Rosebank, Staten Island.

Mr. Barry went to bed at 11:30 o'clock on Wednesday night, telling his wife to awaken him at 7 o'clock yesterday, as he was going to New York and Philadelphia. He slept alone in a room on the second floor of the house, which is the old Bachman mansion. In the room was a combination bed for gas and electricity. The electric light was burning when Mr. Barry was found dead on Wednesday evening preparing for bed. It is supposed that in turning off the electric current he accidentally turned on the gas.

Mr. Barry was born at Enniscorthy, Ireland, forty-seven years ago. He came to the United States when he was 19 years old and devoted himself to electrical study and work. His specialty became printing-telegraphy, which line at his death he was esteemed a great expert. Mr. Barry installed the printing-telegraph plants in Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres about twenty years ago. In 1892 he associated himself with the Stock Quotation Telegraph Company. The funeral will be held on Saturday.

SCHOONER HITS COAL BARGE.

Six Master Bumps the Schuykill and Both Are Badly Damaged.

BOSTON, March 12.—As the result of a collision last evening off Cape Cod between the six masted schooner Mertine Crowley, outward bound for Baltimore, and the coal barge Schuykill, the latter vessel reached Provincetown this morning leaking badly, with her pumps constantly in operation to prevent sinking.

The tug Conestoga, from Philadelphia, was bringing into port the barges Paxtang and Schuykill. About 8 last evening, off North Truro, the Crowley came down the Cape shore and struck the Schuykill a terrific blow, knocking her bow and stern from its position and causing the barge to begin leaking.

The Conestoga anchored the Paxtang and under a full head of steam started for Provincetown with the Schuykill. The latter vessel was in danger of sinking, but the tug succeeded in getting her into Provincetown harbor, where she could be grounded on a beach. The Crowley was also damaged in the crash. She anchored off Nauset, evidently clearing away the wreckage, and at 9:15 this morning she started southward.

COFFIN TOO BIG TO CARRY.

So They Lowered It With Block and Tackle From Sixth Story.

A crowd gathered at Ninth avenue and Fifty-third street last night to watch the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Morgan, who died yesterday at her home, at 104 West Fifty-third street. She weighed over 300 pounds, and it was necessary to lower the coffin from a sixth story window in order to get it out of the house.

The coffin itself weighed several hundred pounds, and was taken up stairs in pieces. When the undertaker found that he couldn't get it out around the turns in the stairway men from a piano factory rigged a fall and tackle from the roof and then removed the coffin. After the coffin was lowered he vice the coffin was lowered without mishap to the ground. Meanwhile so many persons stepped to look on that the police had to keep them in bounds.

COULDN'T REPLY TO GOV. FORT

MODERATOR SHUTS OFF JERSEY CITY'S "BOXING PARSON."

Governor Had Told the Congregationalist Conference Enforcement of Present Excise Laws Should Precede Local Option—Dr. Scudder's Reply Cut Short.

The Rev. John L. Scudder, Jersey City's "boxing parson," was foiled yesterday afternoon in an attempt to "put on the gloves" with Gov. J. Franklin Fort of New Jersey after the latter's address on proposed temperance legislation, now agitating the Apple Jack State, at the windup of an all day session of the Northern New Jersey Congregational Conference in the Waverly Congregational Church, Jersey City. He had just got nicely going on the subject of the Governor's views when the moderator called him to order. A little later the lid was further put down on Dr. Scudder's local option opinions by a unanimous vote on a sudden motion to adjourn.

At the morning session the conference adopted a resolution endorsing the efforts of the Anti-Saloon League to obtain the passage of the local option bill, which it considered "a just measure, demanding the American right of home rule in local affairs." This session, however, his cue and Dr. Scudder and the rest of the congregation listened to him with much interest.

The Governor began by saying that he was not opposed to local option, but believed first in the enforcement of the existing excise laws and the enactment later of other laws further regulating the liquor traffic.

"We have been talking about this glorious republic of ours and its great system and forgetting the man, the individual," he said. "Women are generally to be found on the right side of a moral question, and I really believe the women of New Jersey elected me. I don't mean to be false to either the men or the women if God gives me the power. The individual man should do his duty."

The Governor said that he only had the power to suggest legislation and veto or approve bills, and added: "Remember that the power behind the Legislature is not always speaking for righteousness."

"I said in my canvass," he continued, "that I would obey the Constitution and did not propose to interfere with the Legislature. I am not a boxer, I don't believe in the boss system in the State or in politics. I am going to be responsible to no man; only to my conscience and to my God. You are in a position to accomplish great things in this State if you don't try to undertake too much and destroy what you are trying to do. This is a powerful thing the liquor traffic. You can resolute and all that, but unless you exert the power and influence all the time you will not succeed. When you are asleep the other man is at work. He never ceases to marshal the evil powers, never day or night. Let the individual citizen believe in what is right. Don't criticize a man you believe is doing what he thinks to be right."

Lots of people are shouting against the present President. There is not a man in the United States but believes he is an honest man and has a belief at heart. I differ with him in several things. I'm not going to criticize him. I'm going to stand behind him and hold up his hands. Dr. Scudder in his outburst of local optionist and says he doesn't care who knows it. He recently sent two letters to Gov. Fort telling him what would happen to him and the State legislators if they didn't give the church folks what they were after. He never had the pleasure of meeting the Governor until yesterday.

When the Governor finished talking the parson arose to state what the programme called a "discussion."

"I am very glad," he said, "to hear the Governor say that he is not opposed to local option. We have been trying for some time to get him to express himself."

Then the moderator called the speaker to order by saying that the "discussions" should apply solely to previous addresses by Mornay Williams of New York on "Christianity and the Social Problem" and that the committee had agreed that there should be no public discussion of the Governor's speech.

The Chief Executive signified that he would be pleased to hear what Dr. Scudder had to say, but the moderator held the lid down and the minister quietly and gracefully subsided.

At the close of the session Dr. Scudder and Gov. Fort shook hands as if they were really and truly delighted to meet each other and the dominie said "I was very glad to hear you say that men should be more active. That's just exactly what we're going to do. We're going into town and we're going to hustle for all we are worth."

"I like men of nerve who are not afraid to say what they think," he returned, the Governor. "Pleased to have met you."

DOUBLE FUNERAL IN BROOKLYN.

Robert Manners, Old Division Street Book-seller, Dies Six Hours After His Wife.

Robert Manners, 87 years of age, Caroline Louisa Manners, his wife, Caroline Louisa Manners, died at her home, 575 Monroe street, Brooklyn, and there will be a double funeral from the house to-day.

The couple had been greatly distressed over the death of a daughter last summer and became much enfeebled from constant grieving over her loss. All through her last illness, extending over seven weeks, Mr. Manners spent nearly all his time at the bedside of his wife. Ten days ago he broke down and also had to take to his bed. Then both began to fail rapidly, and at 10:45 o'clock on Tuesday night the wife passed away and just six hours later the husband died.

The couple came from England sixty years ago, and in 1846 Mr. Manners opened a little bookstore at 114 Division street, New York, and ran it for more than forty years. Two sons and three children and one great-grandchild survive.

WOODROW WILSON TO BOYS.

Princeton President Addresses Students in Chicago Preparatory Schools.

CHICAGO, March 12.—President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton, on his first visit to Chicago in several years, began his day's work by giving students of the Chicago Latin School and the University School for Boys advice on the subject of good citizenship, a subject he did not forget to refer to in his formal address to the students as the guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Chicago.

Marry early, have ideals and cherish them, President Wilson said, and remember that the citizen owes a great deal to the country and its institutions was the gist of the advice given to the youngsters.

Tomorrow President Wilson will go to the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, where he will see several of the men who have been associated with him in various organizations of educators.

On Saturday he will return to Chicago to address the Chicago Commercial Club dinner.

Preacher Barred Because He Performed a Marriage on the Stage.

SYRACUSE, March 12.—The Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, rector of St. George's Church in Rochester, married a pair of burlesque actors on the stage at Rochester last night. To-day Mr. Richmond was informed that he could not preach in St. John's in this city, where he has been holding a series of "Sundays." "I didn't want Mr. Richmond to preach here," is the only comment Bishop Olmsted would make.

Saw Toothed, Sharp Spiked Instrument Found on a Fighting Pole.
A pair of "brass" knuckles were shown in Essex Market court yesterday which Lieut. Jones of the court squad said were the most murderous weapons of the kind he had ever seen. They were found on Mike Polchovsky, a Pole, of 19 Oakland street, Greenpoint, and were the cause of his being held in $1,000 bail for General Sessions. He was arrested for fighting. The knuckles were of quarter inch steel and had five saw teeth about an inch long, sharpened to a point in the palm of the hand were two spikes about two inches long, sharp enough to penetrate the brain if driven by a swing of the arm.
